While our economy is rebounding from the Great Recession, hardworking Americans are being left behind. Our economic and political system has lost sight of what matters most: We the People. Quality health care, child care, schools and retirement for everyone: these are the pillars of a democratic society. And yet in the world's richest country, these essentials are painfully out of reach for tens of millions of our fellow Americans.

The 2018 Congressional Progressive Caucus' Budget, known as the People's Budget, provides major reinvestments in our country through infrastructure, education, and wage growth to increase opportunity for all. The People's Budget funds universal child care, increases access to health care, strengthens public schools and universities, provides for humane immigration reform, and expands Social Security.

In order to make these bold, necessary investments in working families, the People's Budget proposes a fair tax systems which closes tax loopholes that corporations use to ship jobs overseas and raises revenue from the wealthiest few who can afford to pay more. It also gradually shifts our discretionary budget from funding wars to investing in the American people.

Question 1:

Do you agree with the spending priorities of the People's budget? Would you have voted for the 2018 People's Budget?
